THOROBRED

E XCELLENCE

This is a place where the pursuit of learning and in it, the pursuit of excellence, is understood to be the basic reason we exist. Here one finds excellence in teaching and in learning. Exciting is the challenge each individual faces in exploring his own mind. This self-exploration is encouraged, perpetrated and initiated by classes and professors. Together they prod, pry, inquire, and inform. Teachers are paramount in this . . . they are the academic mentors who constantly encourage academic excellence.

N OBILITY

This is a place where one may learn what makes a man noble. Through knowledge and understanding, consideration and respect, one learns something of passion which is special though not conscious. Through meaningful and purposeful relationships there is developed a discernment which is rare and singular, a sense of beauty in things which may be absent for others, a perception of values, a courage that claims no homage, and a self-sufficiency which is superabundant and unites men and things.

T RADITION

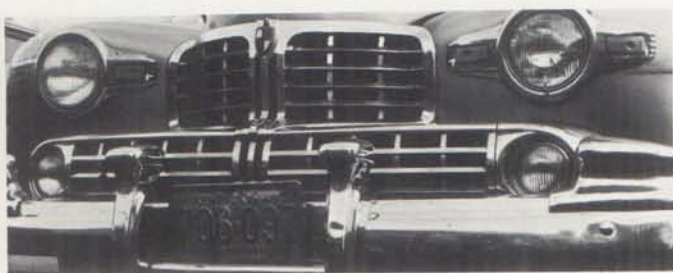

This is a place where the past is not taken for granted. The inherited culture which is ours is respected and studied in order to benefit the future. Here there is an attempt to capture some of the spirit of the past, to define it, refine it, and present it in a form which will make the essential elements of the present and the tomorrows apparent. Here one does not disregard the past, but uses these experiences as the road to knowledge . . . to new insights, to new understandings, to new truths.

U NITY

This is a place where diverse opinions, groups, and creeds come together with a singleness of purpose. People come here from many lands and many races. The result of this interaction is a significant enrichment of the background and understanding of all. Here one finds a community . . . a magnificently diverse one . . . where there is a clash of personalities, a clash of minds. But the harmony of purpose and the harmony of spirit give it a unity that makes it a success.

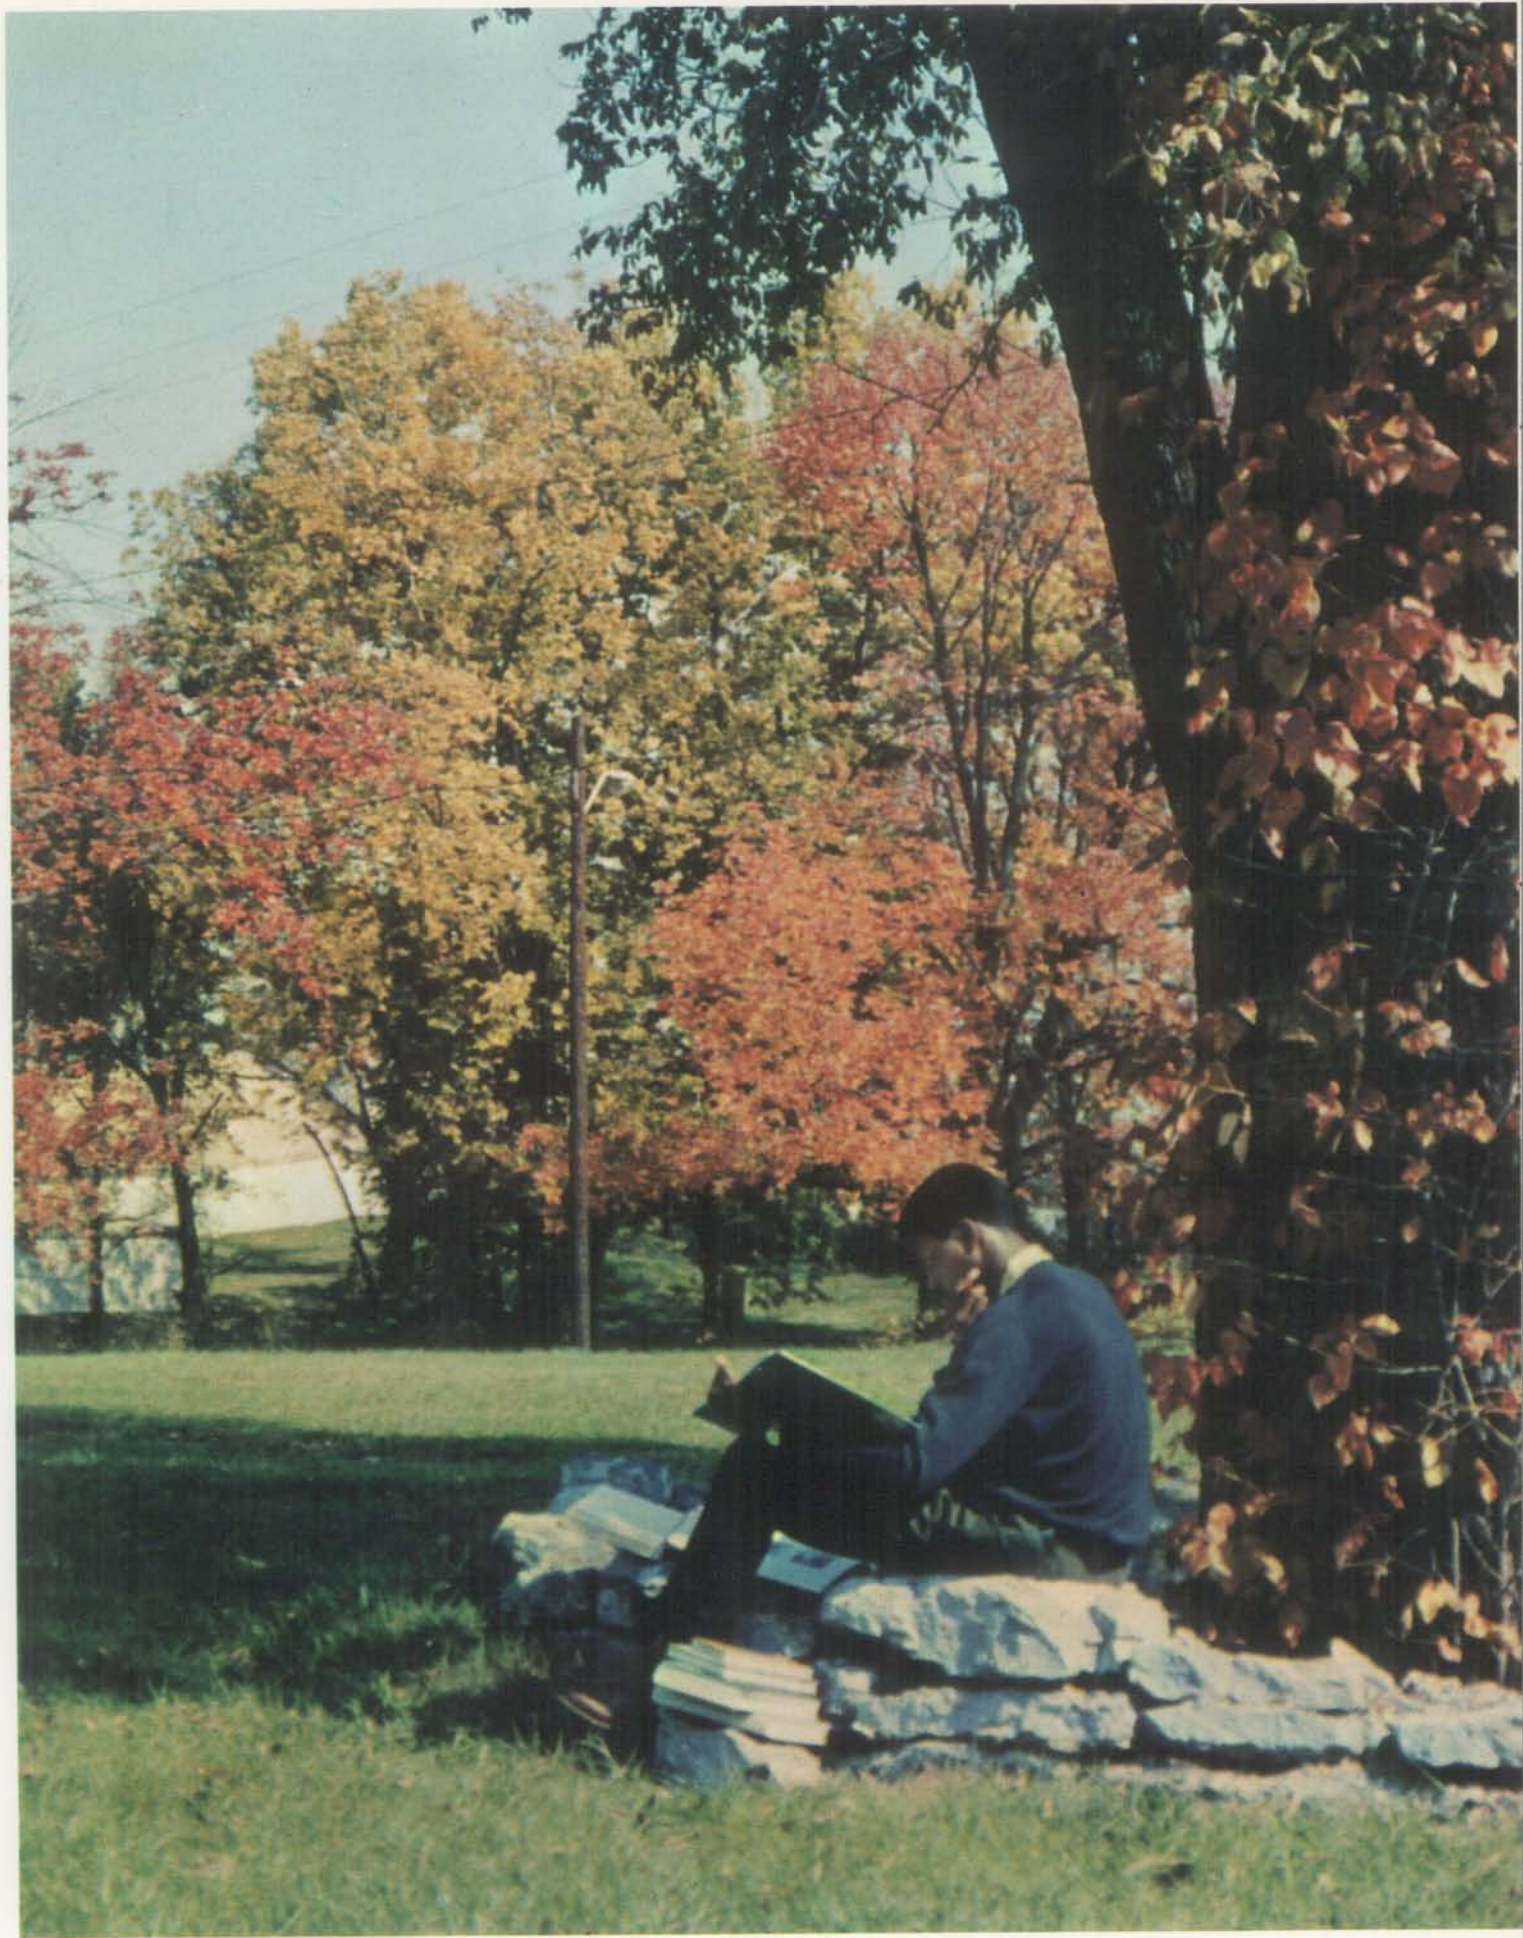

C

OMMITMENT

This is a place where there is a thoughtful turning of pages . . . the sign of study . . . the hushed scribbling of a test, and the sometimes monotone of a lecture. It is a place where the mind may be in ferment. It is a laboratory in living. It is the gigantic task of making knowledge, formal and informal, come alive. It is the student, who, knowing he is not wise, has the deliberate aim to learn from others. Such is his commitment.

KALEIDOSCOPE

This is a place of many parts, of different things . . . working, playing, laughing, singing. Sometimes there is confusion, always excitement, struggling, and searching. The academic is frequently forgotten momentarily . . . a party, a game, homecoming, cafeteria lines, a pretty girl, an escape. It is a place where there are moments of success, of sorrow, of happiness. It is government, rules, regulations. It is ecstasy, agony, worry, joy . . . a hand extended, a decision made. It is a collection of all this and more.

YOUTH

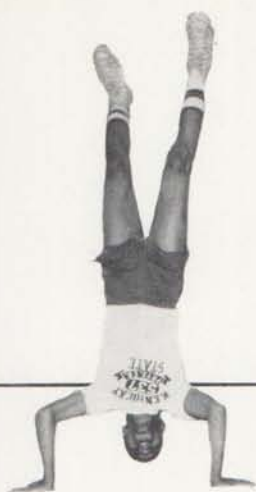

This is a place where one finds the freshness and eagerness of youth. Here life is an adventure, a widening of the outlook, an extension of one's dominion. It is a world of delightful sensations and impressions. It is a state of mind, a time of life. It is the feeling that this day will last forever, outlast the sea, the earth, and all men. But the trivialities of sight, sound and feeling grow and become significant . . . even heavy with meaning.

THE WORLD OF FOOTBALL

The Thorobreds started the season by thumping Fisk 43-0 and built a 4-0 record before dropping a squeaker (20-26) to Central State at homecoming. Bad luck continued to plague the Horses until they bounced back into the winning column with a victory over Edward Waters. Ending the season against Tennessee State for the "Little Brown Jug," the Thorobreds paced the 1965 National Champions 8-0 at half-time before losing the 4th game of the year.

Registration for an Institute on Human Relations

A WORLD OF INSTITUTES AND CONFERENCES

The opening of the new Arts-Business Building with its beautiful auditorium and theater facilities provides additional space for conferences and institutes. As a part of the effort to build a closer relationship between the community and college, invitations are extended to groups to hold their meetings in these facilities.

It is an aim of the college to expand existing and to plan and introduce new instructional programs, credit and non-credit, that will enhance the educational and training opportunities of all who wish to attend. We also strive to build between the college and the surrounding community, feelings of awareness, closeness, and interdependence that will enable each to draw objectively upon the other's resources with confidence and respect.

REGISTRATION AND ORIENTATION

Orientation and Registration will be long remembered for having to stand in endless lines. Neither rain, sleet, snow, no sunshine could cause the registrant to desert his place.

President Hill addresses the incoming Freshman Class.

A long line waiting for a new adventure

. . . And still waiting

Finally made it . . . This is it.

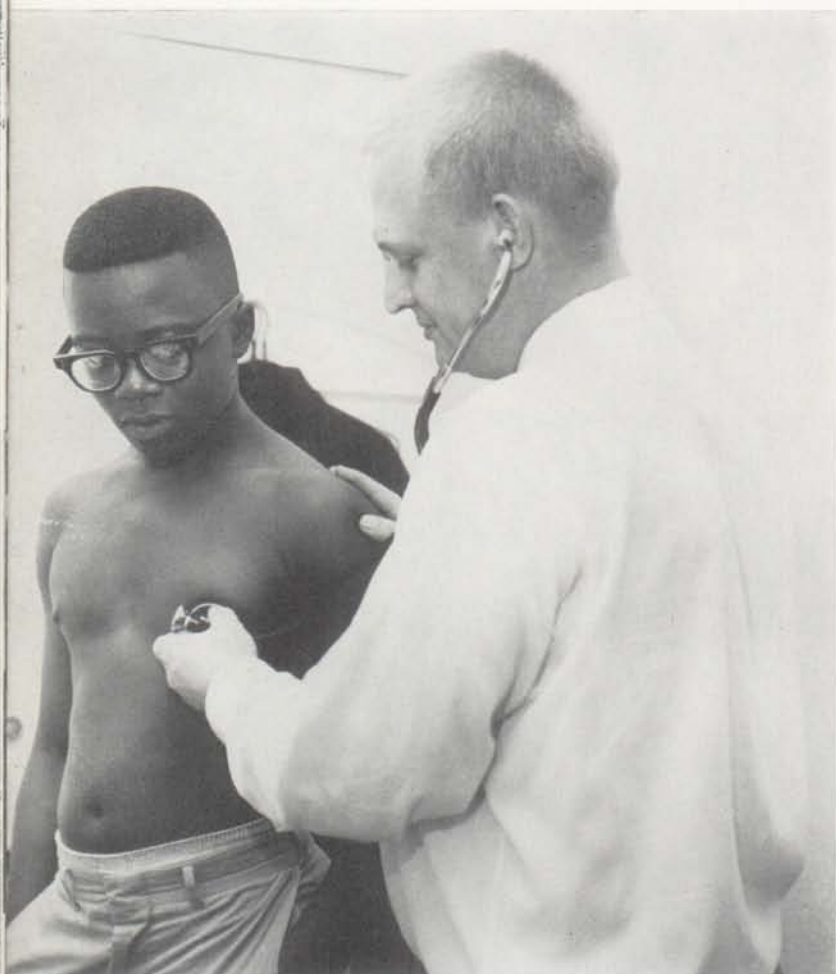

HEALTH EXAMINATIONS

"Which 'E' are you referring to?"

"Yeah, that's my ear drum"

"On a clear day you could see forever"

"I'd rather fight than switch"

A WORLD OF LEARNING

The world of Kentucky encourages the attainment of excellence in scholarship, the acquisition of special skills in the arts, sciences and vocations, and the development of a sense of obligation to contribute to the intellectual, cultural, spiritual, and economic growth of the community. In achieving these ends, the College seeks to prepare its students to think critically; to express themselves creatively; to make independent and rational judgments; and to practical adherence to standards of moral rectitude.

Curricula in three areas are offered: (1) regular four-year liberal arts program (2) two-year community-college program, and (3) later afternoon-evening program. Students may major in Elementary Education, English, French, History and Political Science, Sociology, Social Sciences, Biology, Business Administration and Economics, Business Education, Chemistry, General Science, Health and Physical Education, Home Economics, Industrial Arts, Mathematics, Music Education, and Secretarial Science.

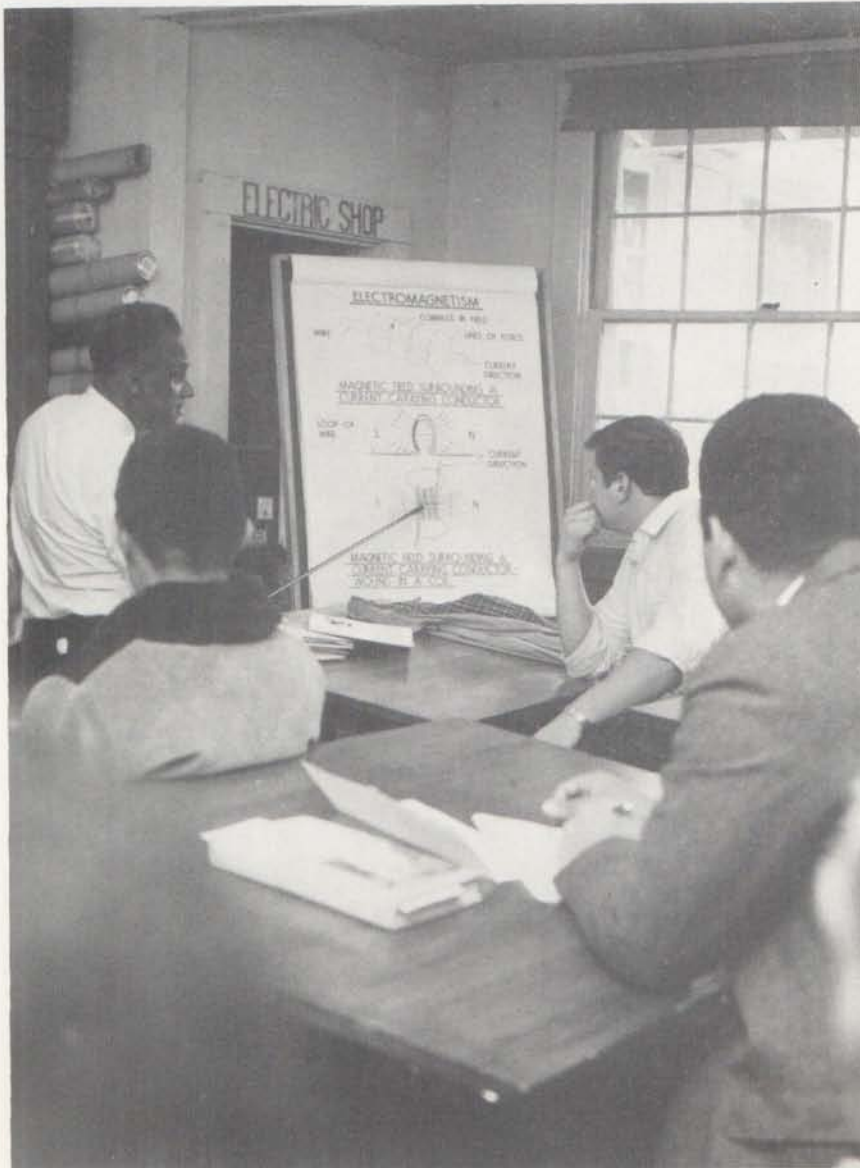

"I can do it!"

"One, two, three, four"

"Do you get the current?"

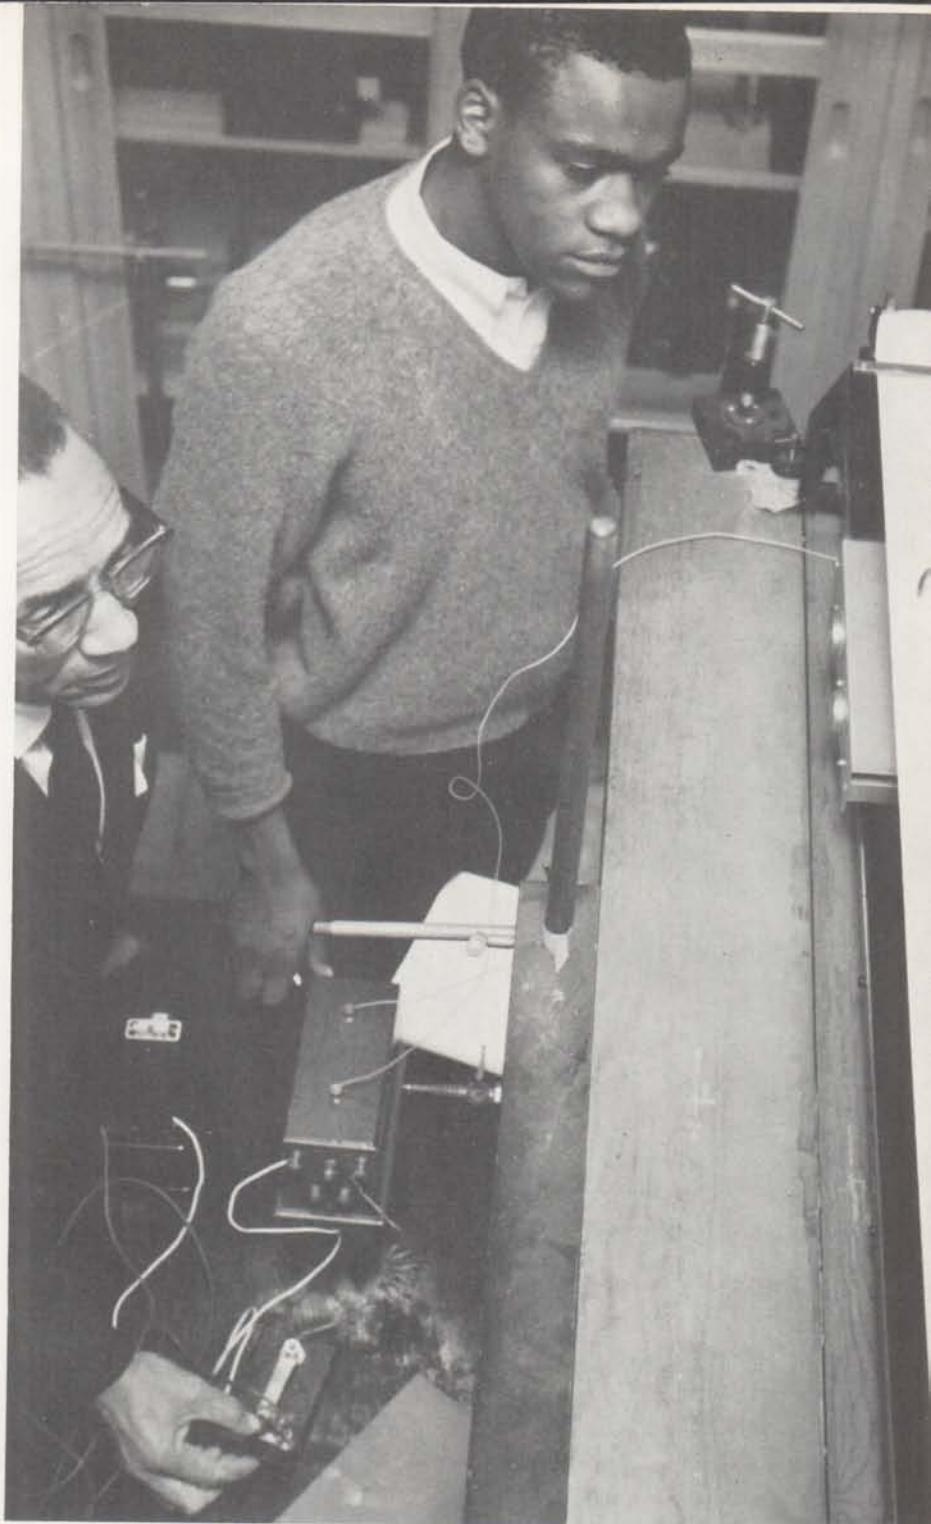

"There's gotta be a choice!"

LEARNING

"Pi squared minus cube . . . what?"

"Watch it all the way down the line"

"One shot of this . . ."

"This Roadrunner is a gas"

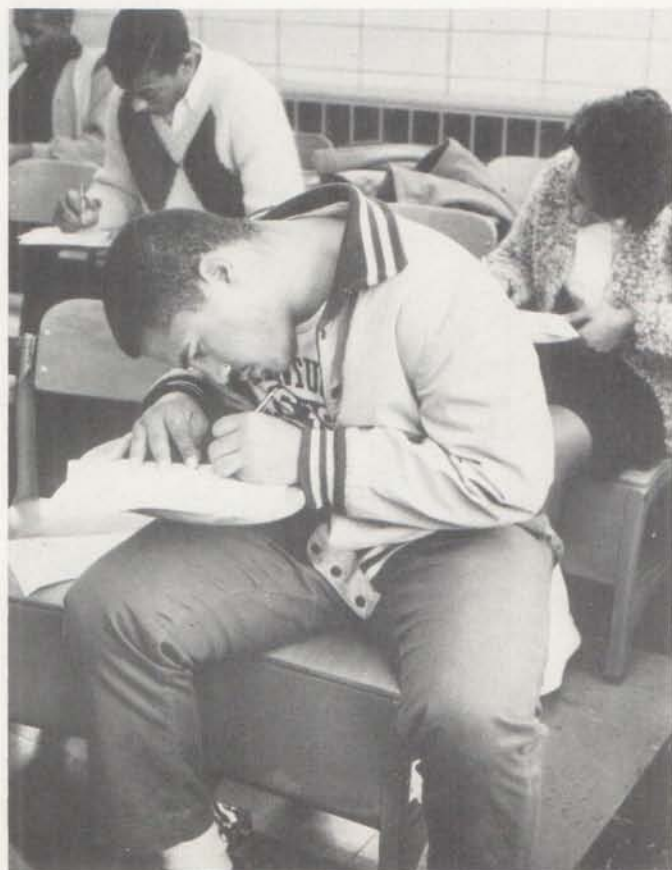

"No, I'm counting my quarters"

"They don't have Playboy catalogued here"

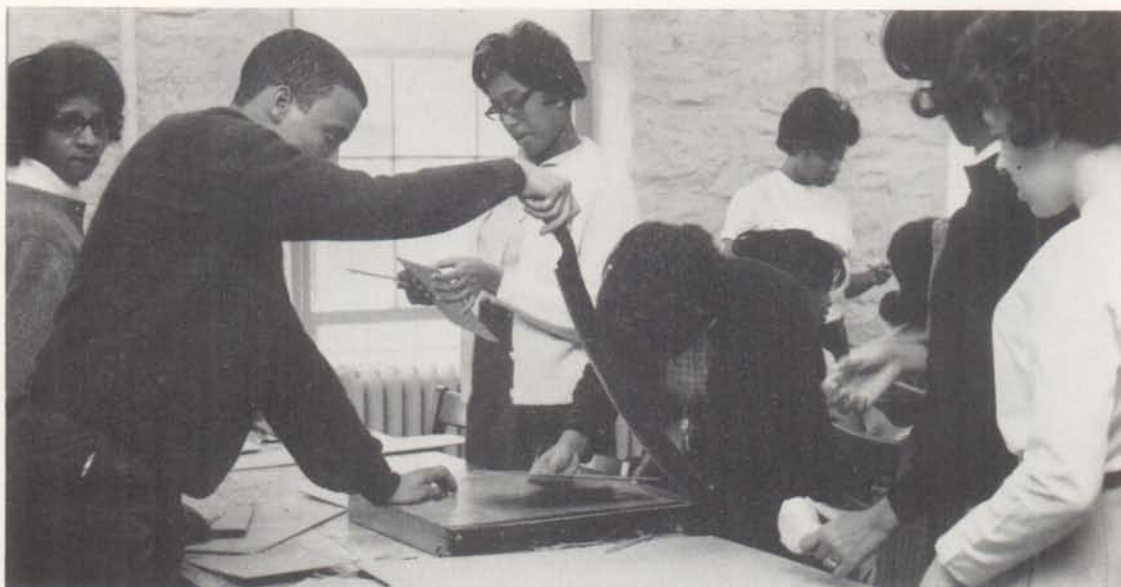

"My neck's killing me"

"It's straight from the book"

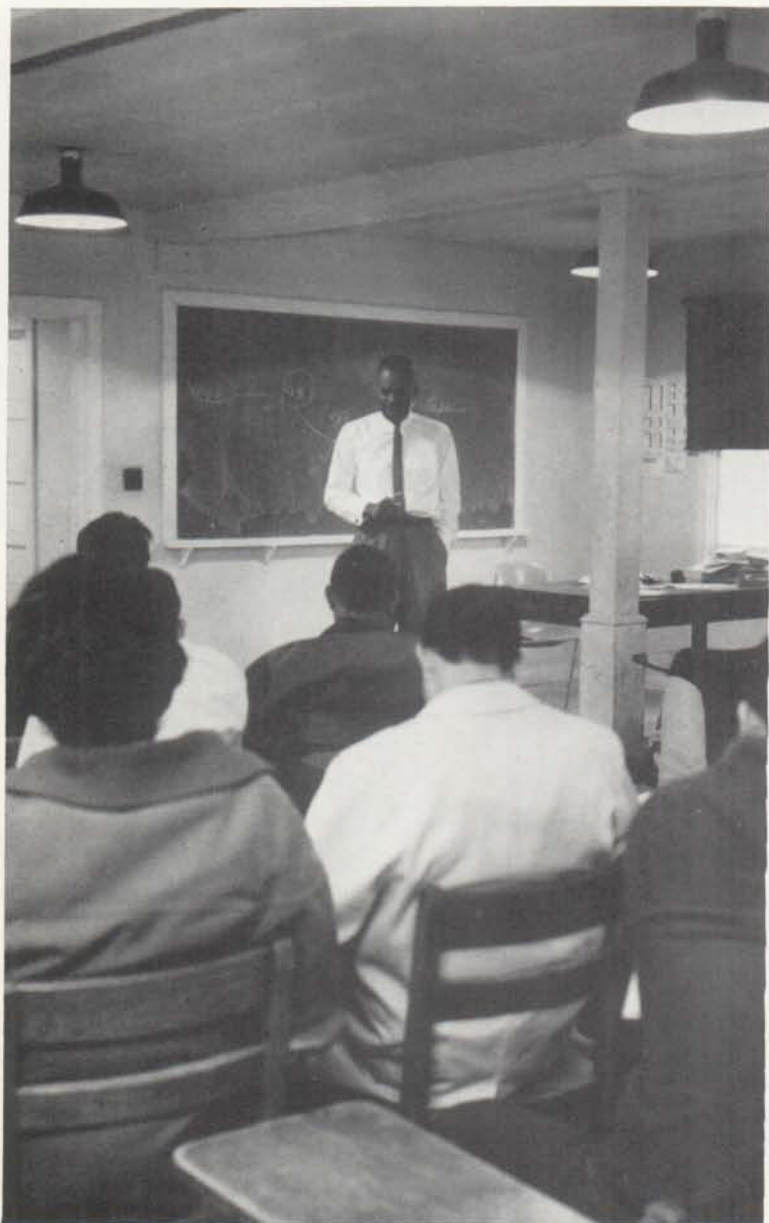

LEARNING

"A little farther and you'll lose your head"

"After this you'll appreciate our new quarters"

"She must be kidding"

"Wemissyou." Comment tally WHO?"

"Show me a perfect paper and I'll eat my hat"

"We made them with our own little . . ."

"I really shouldn't be here"

"That's a rabbit, teacher"

"Now we're back to stringing beads"

"You see I thought this course was for men"

LEARNING

"And if you take my card, you can get a free box of dog yummys"

"Tomorrow I'll put a cover over that clock"

"Anyone for coffee?"

"You have to push this dololly down"

"Would you believe in a hard-back beetle"

"It wasn't funny . . . just getting my cheese in"

LEARNING

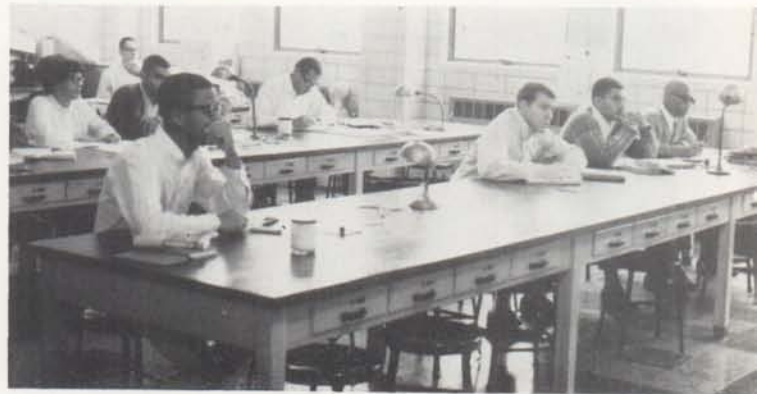

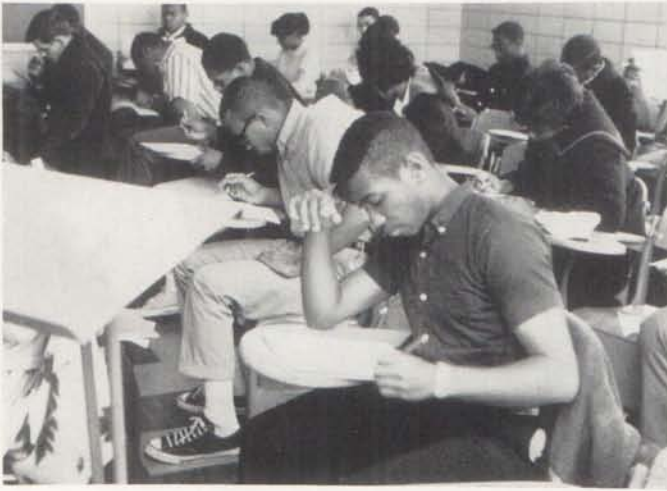

"Where's the ball?"

"You almost had it . . . Let's go! go! go!"

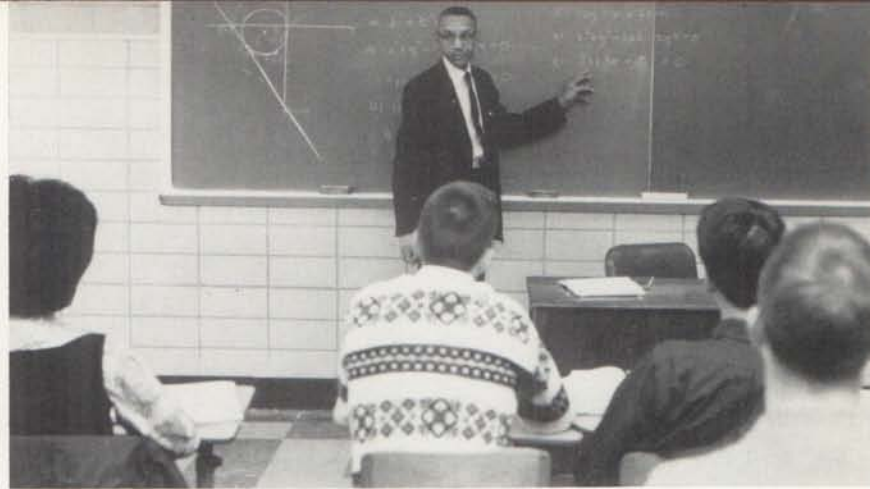

"What's that I smell?"

"I need a left-handed desk"

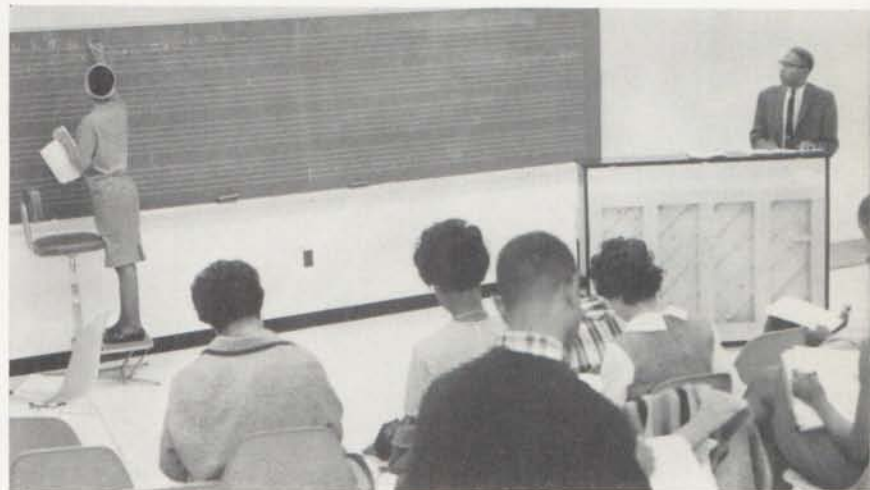

"C-A-L-E-F-R-A-G-I-L-I-S-T-I-C . . . well, you know the rest of it"

"And that bullet went right in this hole"

"You wouldn't believe I have to go to the ski jump"

"Now that's really high 'C' "

"Tap, tap here . . . tap, tap there"

"Now why would you say that when its up on the board?"

GRADUATION

Top scholars in graduating class

The Honorable Robert Weaver, Commencement Speaker

Pomp and Ceremony

. . . AND IT IS ALL DEDICATED TO

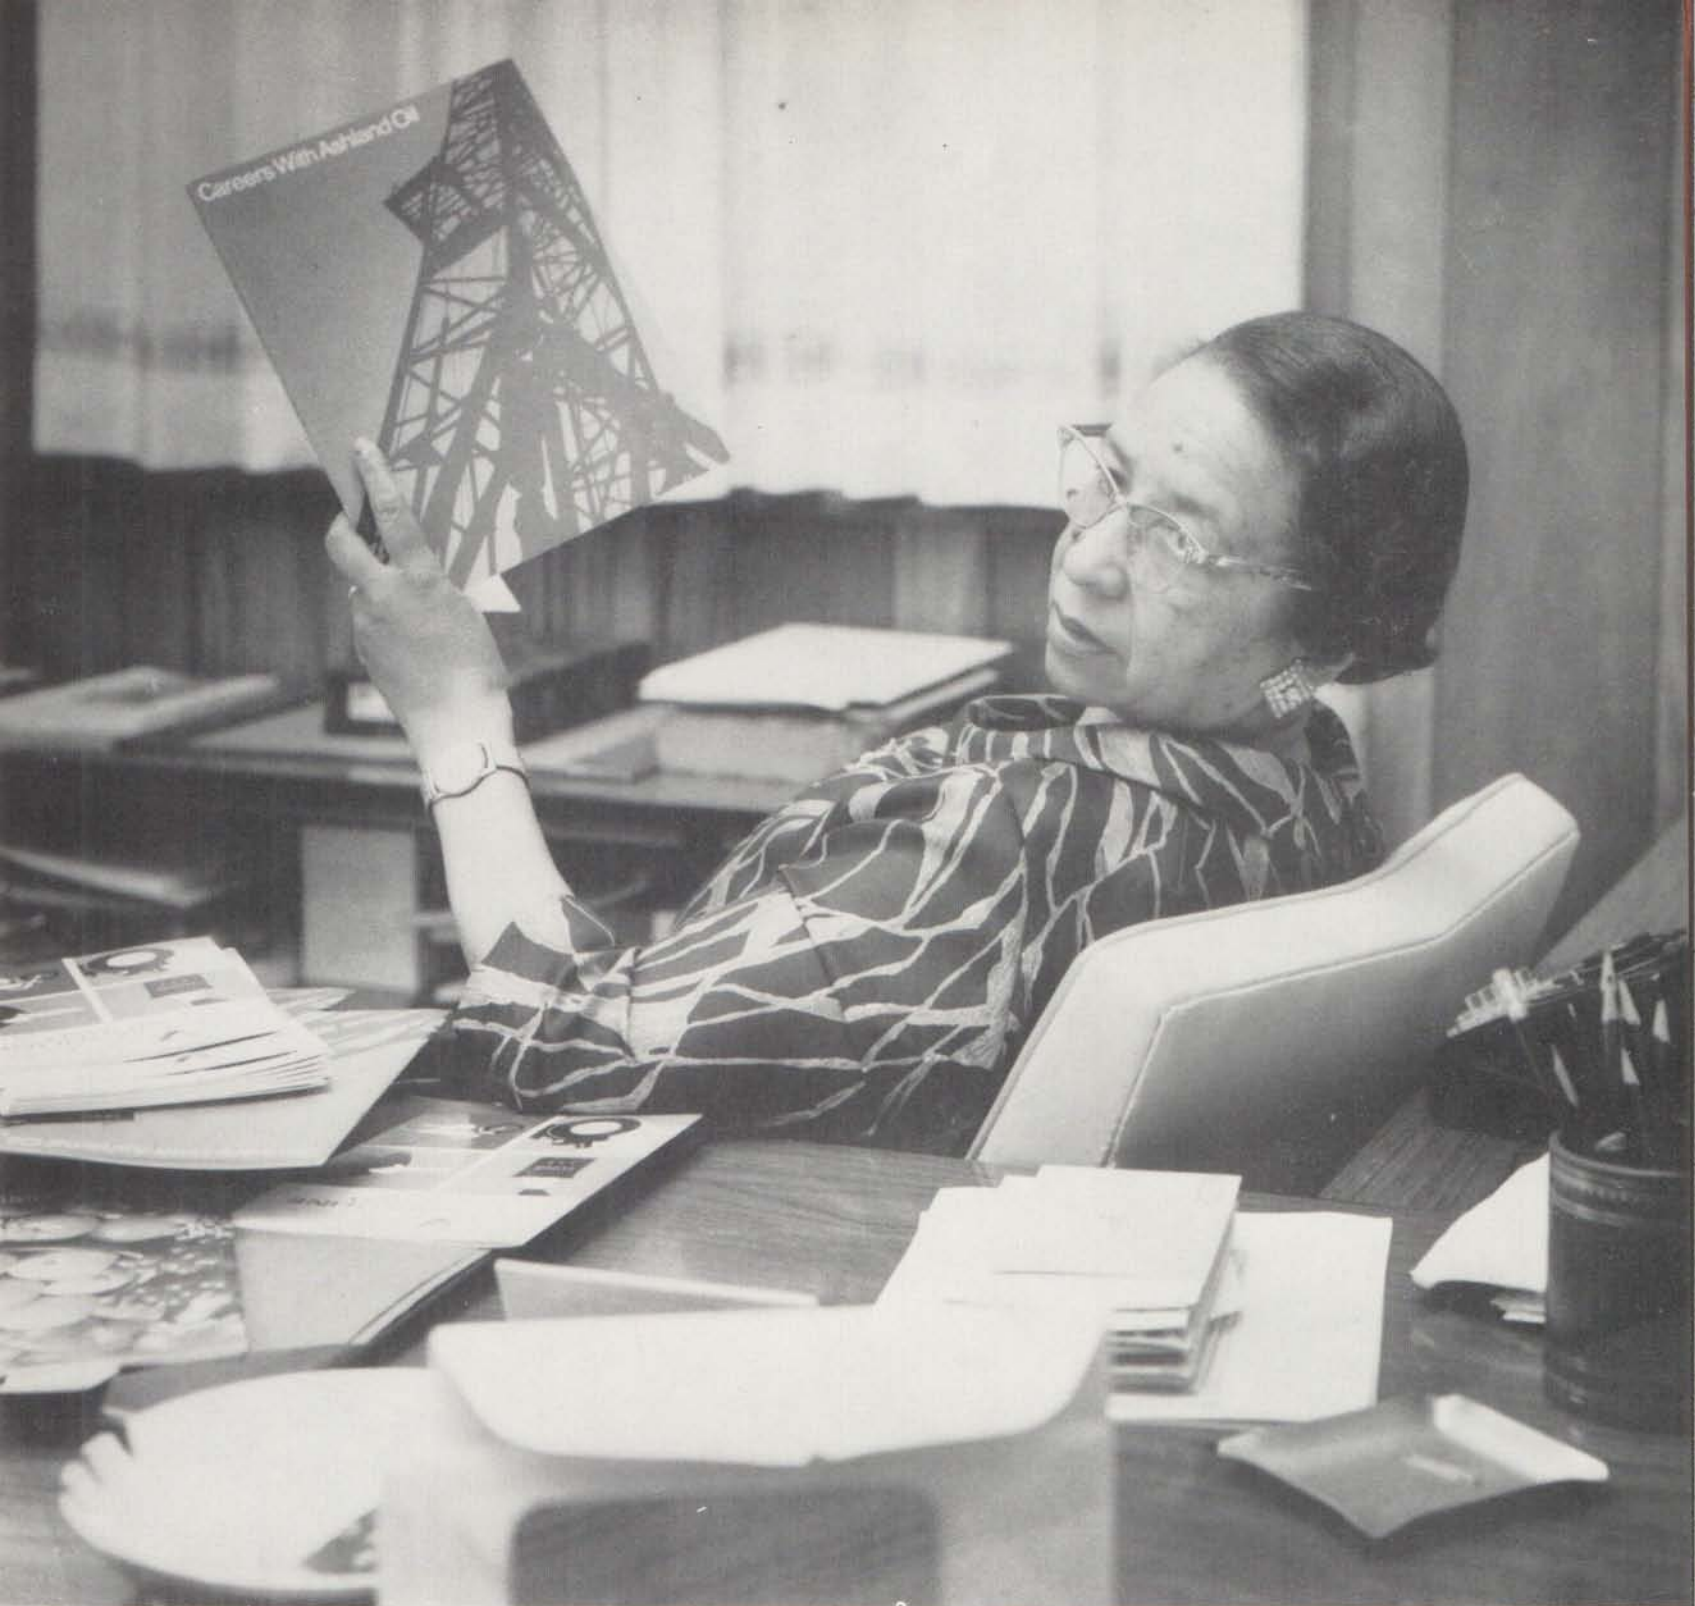

MRS. ANITA M. FIELDS

World traveler, churchwoman, veteran senior class advisor, and Recorder and Director of Placement in the Office of the Registrar, Mrs. Anita M. Fields is a distinguished graduate of Kentucky State College. After completing the baccalaureate degree she studied at Indiana University and was awarded the degree of master of science in 1959. She has been an employee of the College for eighteen years.

Married to Rev. Louis H. Fields of the Methodist Church, she has made significant contributions to the higher echelons of religious activity through membership on the Board of Missions, the Division of World Missions, the Women's Division of the Methodist Church, and the United Church Women.

She has traveled extensively abroad visiting places in Europe, Africa, and Southeast Asia. She is a member of Alpha Kappa Mu Honor Society, the Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority, and is listed in Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities, Who's Who in Methodism, Who's Who Among Women of America and Women of Canada, the International Biographies (England), and the National Social Directory of America.

The 1966 THOROBRED is dedicated to this lady of charm, vision, and concern for all mankind.
